Noted hand surgeon to address Gould grads

By AMY CHAPMAN

The Gould Academy Class of 2002 will receive diplomas Saturday during the school's 166th commencement exercises.

The Rev. Jean Bass will give the invocation, and Dr. Myles Cohen will deliver the keynote address. Valedictorian Caroline Coombs and student speaker Ethan Elliott-Williams will also address their classmates prior to the awarding of honors and diplomas.

Dr. Cohen, a renowned hand surgeon whose practice is at Cedars Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles, is a humanitarian whose talents have had a profound effect on his patients. He has performed surgical miracles for children born with debilitating deformities, and reversed the crippling effects of arthritis on his adult patients.

In the 1990s, when the Soviet Union was ravaging Afghanistan, he traveled to Pakistan to perform surgery on victims of the war, and to teach young Afghans how to handle basic emergency medical situations. Dr. Cohen is a former trustee of Gould Academy, where his son Jonathan graduated with the Class of 1988.

Coombs, valedictorian of the Class of 2002, is the daughter of David Coombs and Margaret Trahms of Frederickton, New Brunswick. She is a National Honor Society member and a student proctor, and has been a member of Gould's Farm and Forest Program and the cross-country team. She has received acceptances to Bowdoin College and Smith College, and plans to attend college in 2003, following a year of service work in Central America.

Elliott-Williams, the son of Robert Elliott and Patricia Williams of Woodstock, was chosen by his

No forestry violations found in Water District inspection

By REBECCA ZICARELLI

The Maine Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and Maine Forestry Service inspected the land owned by the Bethel Water District on Tuesday.

The inspection found no significant violations of state forestry regulations. It also found some good logging practices.

The inspection tour was guided by the district's forester, Doug Schneider. Other district personnel included Lucien Roberge, superintendent; Donnie Katlin; Mike Broderick, Water District Trustee; contractor Denny Wilson of D. A. Wilson; Doug Wilson; and logger, Phil Rolfe. Don Feeney, of New England Forestry Consultants, also went on the inspection, and will prepare a report for the district based on his observations.

Four officials from the state went on the tour. Will Cook, of DEP examined the impact the district's CORRECTION—Not all land in photograph part of BWD. The caption for last week's front-page photograph incorrectly stated that all the land in the photograph belonged to the Bethel Water District. That is not true. In fact, approximately one-third of the land in the photograph — the land in the lower right, below Chapman Brook — does not belong to, and was not logged by, the district.

The information in the caption was based on tax maps and aerial photographs in the Bethel Town Office. We have since learned from many readers that such maps are unreliable. "Don't buy on them. Don't sell on them," advised one caller.

Lesson learned. The Citizen regrets the error.

The remaining land in last week's photograph, including all the land which drains into Chapman Brook above the reservoir, does belong to the district, as does the land on which all of the other photographs accompanying the article were taken.

Few tools available for grappling with cat problem

By MICHAEL DANIELS

How to deal with nuisance cats, and the sometimes filthy households they call home, is becoming an increasingly frustrating, and even expensive, problem for Bethel officials.

"You've got people whose cats are out of control," Police Chief Darren Tripp told the selectmen Monday evening.

Tripp cited two ongoing "hot spots" in town where large numbers of cats are already nuisances — nuisances with the potential to evolve into health and safety problems.

The police have few tools in dealing with such situations, Tripp said, in large part because of the difficulty of proving ownership of cats, which do not have to be licensed.

In cases where such animals are not being adequately cared for, and where ownership can be established, the owners can be charged with criminal abandonment or cruelty to animals, and the cats

Spring finally arrives

Flowers — like these primroses in Bethel — are making a comeback all over Western Maine this week, after a bout of late season cold, snowy weather. The effects of winter's last (we hope) gasp are lingering on Mt. Washington, however, where crews are still at work trying to clear snow from the auto road (see Briefly, page 3).

Greenwood man compiles Civil War diary

By ALISON ALOISIO

Gary (Butch) Fuller of Greenwood spent the last two and a half years getting to know Otis Perkins of Oxford. Fuller describes him as "very dedicated, and he didn't complain a lot."

Fuller became acquainted with Perkins without ever exchanging a word.

Perkins was a Civil War soldier who left behind a four-year account of his experiences in a diary. Fuller has compiled the diary — spelling errors and all — for publication. Since January, he's sold about 150 copies of his book in the region, and plans to print more.

'Battle of bulls run and was repulsed.'

PRIVATE OTIS PERKINS,
July 21, 1861

Fuller is a Civil War buff who got interested in the subject when he was in his 20s. "I read a book on Andersonville (the Confederate prison) and I was hooked," he said.

He continued to read books about the conflict over the years. Then, about three years ago, he was in the Civil War section of a Lewiston bookstore when a man came up and asked if he was interested in the war.

When Fuller said he was, the other asked him if he would be interested in joining a Maine group taking part in Civil War reenactments.

"I had always thought about it, but never did it," said Fuller. So he joined up with the group of about 30, which represents the 3rd Maine Regiment.

As a member, Fuller also took part in presentations to various historical societies in Maine. After such a presentation in Oxford, two women approached him.

"They said they had their grandfather's diary from the Civil War," he said.

Intrigued, Fuller asked if he might copy it to compile. The granddaughters gave their permission.

So he set about trying to decipher and understand the entries of Private Harrison Gray Otis Perkins, a farmer, who enlisted in the 5th Maine Regiment May 6, 1861, at

DID PHOTOG PICK UP THE LITTER?

To the Editor:

I was saddened to see an excellent article about water quality in Bethel ended with a picture of an empty plastic container (nearly empty). As a native Mainer, when I see a plastic jug laying in the forest on an old job site, and it is very rare these days, I see litter. The Bethel Citizen reporter saw "discarded containers from petroleum products — a serious concern in a drinking water watershed."

How is it a serious concern? For years I have heard eco-freaks wailing and whining about how plastic doesn't break down in the environment for "decades" or possibly even "centuries." If that is true, how can a half inch of oil in a container that will not leak for centuries be a threat to the water? Yes, it is unsightly and, yes, it does violate some laws. So what did the reporter or cameraman do about it?

As a logger who loves the forests of this state, I would have carried the container out of the woods or stored it in the building with the others and told someone at the water district who would have told the present logger to pick them up. Hopefully, the reporter did more than write a story, but please answer truthfully. Did you? If so, good for you. If not, shame on you.

Carroll Murphy
Sweden

Reply: Fair enough question, but to clarify — as noted in the photo credit, the reporter did not take the photograph. The photographer, this writer, opted, with a DEP inspection scheduled for this week, not to alter any of the evidence on the ground. We do understand (see front page story) that since our unannounced visit — and, of course, prior to the DEP inspection — a cleanup was undertaken. —MRD

BETHEL OFFICERS HONORED

To the Editor:

On May 23, Dani Littlehale and Nathan Wight of the Bethel Police Department will travel to Hyannis, Mass., to receive the Emmanuel "Manny" Wilson Memorial Award for their work as undercover operatives during a rave held in Lewiston in 2001. This award is presented by the New England Enforcement Officers' Association but is a nationwide award. Our small town should be very proud that our officers have received this honor.

However, due to the town's "budget constraints," the officers were refused the $107.50 to cover their expenses. This meant that they would not be able to attend nor to receive the award.

I want to publicly thank the following citizens who agreed that these two officers deserved our support and contributed to cover their expenses: Cindy and Bob Blake, Nesta and Richard Littlefield. My husband John and I were also donors.

WATERFORD BENEFIT SOCIAL

To the Editor:

Come one, come all, to an Old-Fashioned Community Social to be held in Waterford on Saturday, June 8, from 11:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. (Rain date: Sunday, June 9.)

The Waterford Congregational Church is sponsoring a fundraiser for APFED (see below) on the church grounds and at the Wilkins Community House on Plummer Hill Road in Waterford Village. Bring your picnic blankets and folding chairs and enjoy the good food, games, music and fun while supporting a worthy cause.

The $7 entry fee ($4 for children under 10, and a maximum family charge of $26) covers the cost of a delicious lunch or supper of barbecued meats (vegetarian options available), delicious salads, chips and cold drinks.

Dance and sing along with the live band, and for a nominal fee you can have your face painted, enter a pie-eating contest, try to Dunk the Minister, pick your favorite flavor at the ice cream booth, test your luck at the raffle, and enjoy a day with family and friends in scenic Waterford Village. For more information, call 583-6266.

APFED stands for American Partnership for Eosinophilic Disorders. Ten-year-old Matt lives in Waterford and suffers from eosinophilic enteropathy, one such disorder. A complex disease in which certain white blood cells (eosinophils) are found in higher-than-normal numbers in the digestive system, it is considered to be an autoimmune condition because the abundance of eosinophils causes the body to attack itself.

For Matt, it has caused such severe damage to his esophagus that he can no longer eat and must get nourishment through a tube that goes directly to his stomach.

Matt's mother, Jacque Fanning, has joined with two other mothers of children with eosinophilic disorders to form a new national organization, APFED. The goal of APFED is to educate people about eosinophilic disorders and to support research into causes, early diagnosis, and cures. For further information about APFED, check out the Web site at www.apfed.org, or call Jacque Fanning at 583-6266

OFFICIALS INACTION LEADS TO PET'S DEATH

To the Editor:

Last July, I moved to Woodstock (the town in which I own land and pay taxes) into a studio with my rabbit, Moonflower. Within a few weeks, I discovered that two large dogs roamed at large in the area without supervision.

My landlord said I should call the dog officer about the problem. When the dog officer arrived, he told me that I must provide him with proof; namely photographs of the dogs. I attempted to get photographs but failed to get clear enough ones to use.

Months passed. I had been forced to bring my rabbit indoors in order to protect her from dog perdition. Meanwhile these two dogs continued to roam freely around this property on a daily basis. I could never seem to get a clear picture. When I called the dog officer for the third time he refused to come to the house to see the large dog tracks in my yard. By this time the snow left clear dog prints on the ground around the house. Some of these tracks clearly showed the dogs returning to their home up the hill. When I phoned the dog constable to complain, he told me not to bother him again and to take the issue up with the Woodstock Town Office.

On Dec. 1, I made my first complaint about the dogs directly to the Woodstock Town Office.

In January, I made another complaint to the Woodstock Town Office. Both dogs were still running loose.

One evening in January I saw the two dogs chasing a deer in the yard and called the warden, who came to look at both the deer and large dog prints. It was the first offense, so nothing was done.

In March, I made a third call to the town office to complain. Virtually everyone except the warden declined to look at the dog prints that were in the yard.

That same day I called the police. I was told that this was a civil issue, it was the town's responsibility and it was up to the town to deal with it. It's against the law to have dogs running at large. When the police told me to contact the dog officer I told him he refused to come.

On May 3, I was forced to put my rabbit outdoors in a pen with mesh over the top where I hoped she would be safe. I had another animal that was very ill and could not have the rabbit in the house.

On the morning of May 5 I finally got clear enough pictures to identify the offending dogs and took them to be developed. On May 8, I picked up the pictures. On May 9, I delivered the pictures to the Woodstock Town Office and requested that the matter be taken to court. The same afternoon I received a call from the dog officer, who coldly informed me that the dogs would be leaving in a few weeks and he would not prosecute them.

I made a phone call to the Woodstock Town Office to tell the town manager that I was very unhappy with the outcome of the situation. He told me that there's nothing he can do and that the case would probably be thrown out of court because the property boundaries could not be identified. This latter statement was patently untrue. I explained that I had taken the pictures from a place inside the house, and that the distance between the house and the dogs could be easily identified and paced off. The two dogs were closer than 100 yards away and were in my driveway.

Early this morning, May 10, I heard blood-curdling screams. I raced out the door just in time to witness my rabbit, Mayflower, being brutally murdered by a dog who had broken into her cage. By the time I got to her the dog had ripped open my rabbit's belly and killed her.

If appropriate action had been taken by town officials to pick up the offending animals, even the afternoon before, this tragedy could have been prevented.

Moonflower would have been four years old in August and was my beloved friend and companion.

I called the town office to let them know that their refusal to take action on this matter had been partially responsible for the demise of my rabbit.

Sometime later the dog officer arrived demanding to see the dead rabbit, which I showed him. I was crying. Then he told me that I didn't know which dog had killed my rabbit even after I told him that I saw the dog. I spoke harshly to him and he responded that he was the law. (This is due process?) His parting shot was that I should "go buy another rabbit for $10."

The perpetrators of this tragedy have learned that they don't have to take consequences for their refusal to take this matter seriously. Meanwhile I am left to grieve alone the senseless death of a beloved animal.

Inspection

harvesting operations on streams. The Maine Forestry Service was represented by Merle Ring, forester for Oxford County; Dick Morse, the southern field team leader, and Mark Mayhue, a forest ranger. They inspected the forestry practices on the district's land.

The Department of Human Services, which oversees the district's watershed management and water quality, was not represented Tuesday. DHS is expected to conduct its next annual inspection of the district's operations later in the summer.

A number of minor sedimentation issues were found, but none rose to the level of violation. (See Bethel Citizen story of May 16.)

At the reservoir, Will Cook of DEP said a pile of eroded soil should be moved. The soil is next to the dam, below the reservoir. It was put there when the reservoir was last drained and dredged. Cook recommended having a truck available to haul the dredgings off-site during the next cleaning, and removing the pile of previous dredgings at that time.

The erosion on the primary road generated a great deal of debate. Cook pointed out a stream crossing, located near the bottom of the road, where sedimentation into the stream had recently occurred. (The tributary in question enters the brook below the reservoir, and the sediments would not contribute to turbidity in the water system.)

A number of drainage channels had been dug since The Citizen's visit a few weeks ago. The new channels are intended to direct runoff, which had been running down the road, into the buffer strips at the side.

Cook and State Forester Merle Ring, pointed out that water bars were not placed every 100 feet along the road, and that most of the new channels were ineffective and would simply wash away during a heavy rain.

One solution Cook and Ring suggested was to bury a log in the ridge below each channel to hold them in place.

Cook and Ring also recommended that the district adopt a road maintenance plan to address these issues.

Schneider described a number of plans he has recently developed to improve drainage along the road, and said he planned to begin work on the improvements by mid-June to early July. Both DEP and representatives from the forest service will return to review the work after it is completed.

The discarded oil and gas containers pictured in last week's Citizen had been removed before Tuesday's DEP inspection. An oily haze was apparent on standing water in the log yard, near where The Citizen had found oil containers. A Maine forest ranger said it was from decaying slash.

Cook had to leave early for another appointment, and could not do the entire tour.

"I don't see any violations, but I do see some problems," he said. He suggested that it is important for the district to resolve the problems before new regulations that forbid any sedimentation into streams become effective in 2005.

Cook did not inspect the erosion around the bridge near the log yard. The bridge, designed by Denny Wilson, was intended to minimize disturbance to the stream banks during installation. But the fill used around it is loose gravel and is eroding into the brook above the reservoir.

Ring recommended removing the fill and replacing it with a more "boney" material that will be less prone to erosion.

The tour visited some of the more recent logging sites. The operations were found satisfactory.

Petroleum containers noted by The Citizen on the earlier visit had been removed.

There was an oily haze on standing water in the log yard, near where The Citizen had found discarded oil containers, but Forest Ranger Mark Mayhue said it was from decaying slash, not petroleum leaks.

A ford across the brook, in the upper reaches of the watershed, had clearly been used only in winter, and showed no signs of erosion or sedimentation.

Much of the recent harvesting was a salvage operation, cleaning up ice storm damage in areas that had been selectively harvested in the mid 1990s. The few large trees left in the area showed severe damage.

Roberge said it was critical to remove the ice-storm damage to minimize the threat of a forest fire. He said the road network was also important for fire-fighting access.

The recent harvesting areas already show signs of the regenerative abilities of the northeastern forests. Young whips, raspberry thickets, and saplings cover the land. A young forest of birch, beech, and maple has taken root here. The forest will regenerate as hardwood. There was little softwood there to begin with, and the winter harvesting doesn't expose the mineral soils softwoods need to germinate.

At the end of the inspection, Ring said, "This is as good as most of the logging operations I've seen."

Richard Morse, the southern team leader for the Forest Service, added to Ring's assessment. "It's clear you're doing a good job of not affecting the quality of the water."

On Tuesday the Water District replied in writing to a number of logging-related questions that had been submitted by The Citizen earlier this month. The questions and answers will be printed, unedited, in next week's edition.

From the Bethel Police Log:

Hot canoes and paraphernalia, too

At 10:10 p.m. on May 17 police stopped three subjects on Vernon Street for a vehicle defect. One of the subjects, a juvenile, was riding in the back of the truck under three canoes. An inquiry about the canoes produced stories that did not match. The subjects were taken to the Oxford County Jail. During transport, it was found the canoes had been taken from a local business. Jeremy C. Gibbs, 18, of Bethel was charged with receiving stolen property. The two juveniles were charged with the same, as well as with possession of drug paraphernalia.

Friday, May 17

At 12:13 a.m. police were flagged over by a motorist advising of a possible intoxicated driver. During the conversation, the subject in question drove by and nearly struck the complainant in the back. The subject was stopped. He showed signs of intoxication and was given a battery of field sobriety tests and then arrested for OUI. After a breath test, Roger J. Fortier Jr., 35, of Jay was taken to the Oxford County Jail.

Saturday, May 18

At 10:25 p.m. police met with a subject who said that while he was parked on Park Street, a subject struck his vehicle and then fled the scene. The complainant had made contact with the subject and was asked not to tell police it was a hit and run. The officer issued a summons to John C. Boyd, 20, of Elliot for failure to notify owner/operator of a vehicle of an unattended collision.

Seven arrested on drug charges

RUMFORD—Seven men and women from Rumford and Mexico were arrested on cocaine trafficking charges last week. Warrants were also issued for two other men from Rumford and one from Dixfield. The arrests were the result of a six-month undercover investigation by Rumford police. Thirty-six law enforcement officers from eight agencies took part in the bust. Arrested were: Mark Allen, 41; Jarrod Chessie, 18; Ronny Rumley, 45; Lynda Allen, 41; Lyn Adams, 33; Jennifer Benya, 34; all of Mexico; and Donny Holder, 26, of Rumford. Arrest warrants on individual felony charges of cocaine trafficking were issued for Gary Tardiff, 41, and David Paquette, 25, both of Rumford, and Steve Marin, 38, of Dixfield. Paquette and Marin turned themselves in Tuesday. Others charged with felony cocaine trafficking were Mark Allen, four counts; Chessie, one count; Lynda Allen, one count; and Benya, one count. Rumley was charged with four felony counts of cocaine trafficking, one of which was reportedly made near a school. Adams and Holder were each charged with felony cocaine trafficking. Police confiscated several packages of cocaine in the bust. Cocaine was allegedly being openly used and sold in Jack's Place, a bar in Rumford, and many of the arrests stemmed from undercover drug buys at the bar, according to police.

New positions at Telstar

BETHEL—The SAD44 Board of Directors Monday appointed current employees to two newly-created "dean of students" positions at Telstar. Scott Edwards, a math teacher at the high school, was named to the THS position at a salary of $31,078. Tom Riley, a middle school science teacher, will have the job at TMS at a salary of $44,379. The high school duties will include issues such as discipline, attendance, scheduling, budgeting, parent/community communication, and student transition from TMS. Riley's responsibilities will be divided between the dean duties and Title I math/language arts instruction. The Title I responsibilities had previously been handled by tutors. The TMS dean duties will include responsibilities similar to those at THS, and will replace those of current TMS assistant principal Sally Hannon, who is retiring. The restructuring will be done with no overall increase in salary funds, said Supt. Kent Rosberg. Carroll Higgins, currently the athletic director/assistant principal at THS, will continue his AD responsibilities, as well as perform some teacher evaluations, monitor school accreditation, and handle all pupil-evaluation-team meetings (of which there were 100 this year, according to Rosberg). Higgins is scheduled to retire in 2004. Telstar principal David Murphy will focus more on supervising teachers and instructional issues, said Rosberg. In other business Monday, the board also appointed Sarah Bayard Southam as a chemistry teacher at Telstar High School. Southam, who holds a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Dartmouth College and a master's in education from Harvard University, most recently taught at Phillips Exeter Academy.

Woodstock group wants snack shack

WOODSTOCK—The Woodstock Athletic Boosters are proposing to build an 8-by-8 snack shack at Thurlow Field, selectmen learned Tuesday. The shack would be located near the scoreboard on the baseball field. Materials would be donated, and construction would be done by volunteers, said John Fitzmorris, a member of the group. Town manager Vern Maxfield later informed the Planning Board of the plan, and the planners gave informal permission to proceed, Maxfield said.

Wife-carrying moves to October

NEWRY—The North American Wife-Carrying Championship will take place in October this year, instead of August. The championship is scheduled for Oct. 12 at Sunday River Ski Resort, which will serve as the sole sponsor beginning this year. The event was established three years ago by the Mahoosuc Arts Council as a fundraiser. The rules call for two-partner teams — one male, one female, to navigate a course with water and other obstacles in the fastest possible time. One team member must carry the other.

No early season for auto road

MT. WASHINGTON, N.H.—Back in April, it was reported the Mt. Washington Auto Road was on target to open for the season on the earliest date in their 141st history — April 27, weather permitting. Even though it was an average year of snowfall on Mt. Washington — more than 262 inches — the road crew had made it to the summit and the auto road was just about ready to open. Then, the kind of weather Mt. Washington is famous for started. Snow covered the mountain and sent the road crew back to work and the early opening turned out to be wishful thinking. The road crew then worked toward a May 4 opening — the snow kept falling and opening was delayed again. The new opening day was Saturday, May 11. The snow was cleared and the auto road opened to the summit for about four hours that day and a couple of hours the next day. Then the snow started up again and fell through Wednesday, May 15, leaving snowdrifts in excess of four feet at the halfway mark on the auto road. The graders, backhoes and bulldozers that are usually put away by this time are still on the mountain being used to get the auto road open to the summit. As of noon on Friday, May 17, the road was open to just about the tree line for private vehicles. "We'll open to the summit as soon as we can. It all depends what the weather does. We're used to snow falling in all 12 months of the year, but this is a bit extreme even for those of us that have been at the auto road for years," said Mt. Washington Auto Road general manager, Howie Wemyss. "We're allowing private vehicles right now and will resume guided tours once we start running to the summit again." The Mt. Washington Auto Road is the oldest manmade attraction in America, having first opened to the summit of Mt. Washington, the highest peak in the Northeast in 1861.

Adelphia officials resign

COUDERSPORT, Pa.—Adelphia Communications Corp. announced Sunday that James R. Brown has resigned from his job as vice president of finance, just days after two members of the embattled cable-television company's board of directors resigned. Adelphia founder John J. Rigas, company chairman and chief executive officer, and his son, Timothy, chief financial officer, both resigned last week. The resignations came in the wake of the company's revelation that it had failed to disclose $2.3 billion in borrowing by the Rigas family and partnerships for which the company might bear liability. The company also confirmed last week that the Securities and Exchange Commission was investigating, delayed filing its annual 10-K financial statement, and said it would restate three years of financial results to show $1.6 billion of the off-the-books debt as a liability.

Don't post signs on power poles

AUGUSTA—Central Maine Power Co. is reminding people that posting signs on utility poles can endanger workers and can lead to fines. Nails, tacks, screws, and staples left in a pole from attaching signs can cause life-threatening rips in insulating gloves, tear clothing, cut workers, or lead to other accidents that could hurt people and interrupt service. Attaching anything to a pole without permission is a civil offense that can draw a fine of up to $100.

New gas cans proposed

ALBANY, N.Y.—Old rusty or plastic gasoline cans stored in garages and basements would eventually give way to more environmentally sound — and more expensive — gas containers under a proposed state regulation. Similar efforts to get rid of old cans — more prone than newer versions to produce gas spills and emission — have spread to the East Coast from California, with states from Virginia to Maine joining the movement. All measures allow a year for inventories of old cans to be sold, and consumers won't face recalls of old containers. The Alliance for Proper Gasoline Handling says the little spills from gassing up lawnmowers, boats and stranded automobiles put 9 million gallons of gas, the equivalent of a supertanker, into the ground each year. The vapors from the often uncapped 78 million old cans nationwide also contribute tons of emissions daily.

Diary

the age of 23. The palm-sized diary, said Fuller, "was hard to read. Some of it wasn't written under the best of conditions."

He went through the diary without correcting spelling or punctuation, a common practice for those compiling such diaries, he said. It gives the reader "a feel for the time and circumstance," said Fuller.

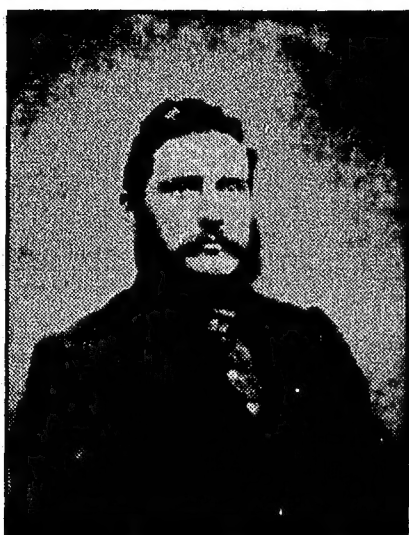

In most cases, Perkins' entries were brief, but Fuller provides the reader with more context by including information from other sources, much of it obtained through the Maine State Library.

Perkins' very first entry came in the aftermath of the First Battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861. "Battle of bulls run and was repulsed," he wrote.

Adds Fuller, "The Maine units under Col. Oliver Howard's Brigade, were committed to the fray, but they were so exhausted from their long marches at the double quick in the extreme heat, with no food or adequate water, they could barely walk, much less fight. Nearly half of the regiments were lost to fatigue on the march to the battlefield."

In another entry on June 7, 1862, Perkins wrote: "On picket on the outposts plain in sight of the rebels one 3 (1/3?) of a mile. Fort darling taken with 3,700 prisoners"

Adds Fuller, "The Union pickets and the Confederate pickets were very close to each other in this area. The troops from both sides would often, at times like this, take the opportunity to talk to each other and trade goods. Usually the trade was Union coffee for Confederate tobacco. This practice was frowned on by officers on both sides, but was generally overlooked. The next day they would go back to trying to kill each other."

OTIS PERKINS
just prior to enlisting in the Union Army.
Perkins' granddaughters remember him as an old man, his walk and posture still affected by a wound suffered in 1865, when he was struck in the chest by a bouncing cannonball.

Fuller said he would change a word in Perkins' writings only if it was otherwise too confusing for the reader. Any changes appear in parentheses.

Fuller got to know Perkins' style, and used it to help "translate." For example, he said, "I'd look for how he made his 'g's'."

But some of the information escaped him, too. "I'd study a sentence for an hour sometimes. But there were some words I just couldn't get. It's all there — you just couldn't read it."

Fuller also includes 10 letters written by Perkins, which provide much more detail than the diary. In an 1861 letter from Alexandria, Va., Perkins writes his mother asking how the farm crops are doing.

"How do the crops look and how many eggs have you sold and how many chickens have you raised this year Eggs are worth 36 cts. per doz here and milk from ten to fifth cents a quart."

Wounded

Late in the war, on March 25, 1865, near Petersburg, Va., Perkins wrote the following: "We packed up this morning. This afternoon we attacked the rebels in front of Fort Fisher and drove them back. I was wounded about 4 1/2 P.M."

With no further details, Fuller had to resort to the pension records of Perkins to find out more about his wound. (These were obtained through an acquaintance Fuller contacted on the Internet, in a Civil War chatroom.)

Fuller learned Perkins was struck in the chest by a bouncing cannonball as he lay on the ground, breaking several ribs.

According to the pension record, "That the ribs thus broken off have fallen in, compressing the lungs, causing much pain and difficulty in breathing. There is much numbness and loss of power or motion in the left side and limbs, by reason whereof he is disabled for manual labor."

Perkins' granddaughters, said Fuller, can remember him as an old man, his walk and posture still affected by the wound.

Perkins was in the army hospital for some time, and on April 8, shook the hand of President Abraham Lincoln when the president visited wounded soldiers.

Six days later, Lincoln was assassinated.

"The President was shot this evening about 10 by a villain," wrote Perkins in his April 14 diary entry.

Perkins left the service in June, arriving back in Portland July 2, to make his final diary entry: "We got to Portland at two this morning and got Breakfast and marched out to Camp Berry."

He returned to Oxford and still managed to farm and do carpentry despite his wound. He died in 1930. After two years of research, "It's just like I knew him," said Fuller.

At the beginning of his book, Fuller writes, "To hold in my hand the original diary written by a soldier who was in the First Battle of Bull Run, took part in Burnside's infamous 'Mud March,' was wounded at Fort Fisher, shook hands with President Abraham Lincoln, spent nearly four years out in the rain, snow, sun and mud, and did his duty with hardly a complaint, just sends shivers down my spine. Thank God for Otis and the many thousands like him."

The book on Perkins is available at Books 'n Things in Oxford and Maine Line Products in Locke Mills.

Fuller is planning another diary compilation, this one on an army assistant surgeon from Standish. He expects it to take another two years.

classmates to address them at commencement. He has been active in the drama program at Gould, and as a member of the soccer and lacrosse teams. He was recently elected to the National Honor Society and will continue his education at Yale University in the fall.

On Friday afternoon, the Rev. Brendon Bass will deliver the invocation at Gould's traditional baccalaureate ceremonies at the West Parish Congregational Church. Senior Megan Holtham will present the class banner, and the graduating class has selected classmate Gregory Perchik and faculty members Bradford Clarke and Erik Janicki to address them.

Perchik has attended Gould for four years, and will continue his studies at the Queens University in the fall. He is a student proctor and has been active in Gould's music program and as a member of the Outing Club and snowboard and tennis teams. He is the son of Lawrence and Sandra Perchik of West

Boxford, Mass.

Janicki is a graduate of Gould Academy's Class of 1991. He has taught biology and ecology at the school for seven years, and was instrumental in the development of the Farm and Forest Program. He is departing at the end of the current school year to continue his education at the University of New Hampshire, where he will pursue a master's degree in microbiology.

Clarke has taught history at Gould for five years, including such senior elective courses as Eastern Religions and Islam Today. He holds a Ph.D. in political science from Brandeis University.

On Friday evening, the Gould music department, under the direction of James McLaughlin III, will present its annual spring concert in Bingham Auditorium. The concert, which begins at 8 p.m., will feature both instrumental and vocal selections. It is open to the public and there is no charge for admission.

Cats

But even in those rare cases, the problem does not stop there.

"Our biggest problem with the cats is what we do with them once we catch them," Tripp said.

There are few places willing to take the cats, Tripp said.

"Presently the only place we have been able to find that will accept cats is Responsible Pet Care in Norway."

And as the number of cats involved in a situation increases, the number of options for disposing of them humanely decreases.

In an earlier case Responsible Pet Care was reluctant to accept six cats, Tripp said, but they eventually agreed to.

"But," he said, "when you're talking 12, 15, 20 cats, there's no place in the world that will take them," Tripp told the selectmen.

And even in situation where a shelter can be found, the cats must be taken to a veterinarian, examined, and either given shots or euthanized.

All told, Tripp said, the cost to Bethel amounts to at least $71 per cat, often more.

"A typical situation is 10 to a dozen cats," he said, "and at $80 each that's $1,000."

And it isn't just the money, he told the selectmen, it's the general frustration of attempting to deal with the conditions out of which such problems often arise.

"The central problem is the house," he said.

Town Manager Scott Cole agreed, but noted there is little the town can do in such situations, especially since they are largely not addressed in town ordinances.

"There's a presumed right to live in squalor," he said.

Tripp said later that the problem of nuisance cats is statewide. Animal Control Officer Ozzie Hart is contacting other ACOs, Tripp said, and attempting to see if there is some way to press for a statewide solution.

Bethel

by Virginia Keniston

Bethel certainly has its share of birds this spring. Sighted at a Bethel residence from 5 to 6 a.m. on Tuesday, May 21, were the following birds: orioles, blue jays, mourning doves, goldfinches, purple finches, a female black-throated blue warbler, downy and hairy woodpeckers, song sparrow, white-crown sparrow, robins, chickadees, hummingbirds, chipping sparrows, catbirds, cowbirds, a brown thrasher, white-throat sparrows, tree sparrows, evening grosbeaks, pigeons, grackles, tree swallows, and heard were crows, a flicker and a phoebe. A deer, several chipmunks, a woodchuck and a gray squirrel rounded out the count. Both nuthatches were seen later in the morning.

Rick and Melissa Young of Bryant Pond and Jane Young of Bethel spent the week in Portland, Ore., and attended Laurie Young's graduation from Lewis and Clarke University. She received a master's degree in sociology and anthropology. She plans to spend the summer white water rafting in Oregon and in the fall will pursue further studies in New Zealand.

On Saturday, the Androscoggin Chorale held a concert at the Norway Congregational Church. Amy Davis attended this concert, as her daughter, Susan White, was a member of the group.

Muriel Butters spent the weekend in Bar Harbor visiting Bruce and Lottie Stevens and sons, Aaron, Alex and Adam.

Bud and Shirley Clough are at home in West Bethel after spending the winter in Florida.

Harry and Barbara Kuzyk recently returned to their Bethel home after spending the winter in Florida.

Allen and Jackie Cressy spent the weekend in Concord, N.H., helping Al's parents move to a new apartment. It snowed heavily during much of the move, but the gray day was made much brighter when Jackie found her mother-in-law's diamond ring that had been missing for several years.

On Saturday, May 11, Lindley

and Pauline Wieden drove to Presque Isle to attend their 61st class reunion of the graduating class at Aroostook State Normal School, now the University of Maine in Presque Isle. On the return trip, on Sunday, they stopped at the home of their daughter and husband, Catherine and Thomas Sands, in Dover-Foxcroft for a Mother's Day cookout. The Sands' three children, Amber, Seth and Joshua were all there. Another daughter, Priscilla Hansen, who also lives in Dover-Foxcroft, came over with her four daughters, Ashley, Jennie, Emily and Anna. A lovely time was shared by all.

On Friday evening, May 10, the Wiedens' eldest daughter and husband, Sylvia and Blaine Miller of Norridgewock, came and took them out for an early Mother's Day dinner.

Dates to remember at Crescent Park School: May 30, Grade Five travels to Boston and returns on May 31; June 5 is Step-Up Day; June 6, Grade Five has Celebration Night; and June 11 is the last day of school.

Sunday River Valley

by Rockie Graham

Amidst the snow and the cold, nature still knows that it is spring. The songbirds are back and they're still chirping, even though it is cold. The turkeys are in evidence along the roads, flying and doing their odd little run. I saw a groundhog the other day. I was just looking out the window and saw something moving in the woods. I was not clear it was real, until it ran. I have yet to see a deer or moose this spring. That, too, will come.

Am attempting to get back into my workout routine. It is amazing how easy it is to get out of a routine, and how difficult it is to get back into it. Last week, with a little help, I actually made it to the gym, twice. Maybe this week I can try for three times. Tasha would prefer I did outside time, instead, but with the rain, I've been negligent on that score.

Mike Liberti has returned from Bolivia looking tanned and in very good spirits. Hope he and Dave Nivus had a great time. Sounds like the trip was good.

Thursday (the 23rd) is the 6th anniversary of the Bethel Area Poets Society. Although in a lull, right now, we are more than welcome to new poets. Anyone with any interest, should give us a call at 824-3427, or join us at the Black Bear B&B from 7 to 9 p.m. tonight. Bring your favorite poems, read your own poems, or just come to listen.

The hour gets late and I must get ready for work. Have a good week, stay safe and come join us for an evening of poetry.

Hanover

It started snowing in the late afternoon on Monday, May 13, after two days of rain. By the next morning several inches had accumulated. The rain continued most of the day Tuesday and patches of snow remained on the ground until the end of the week. A power failure Monday evening, that lasted about an hour, was blamed on the heavy snow and roads were reported to be very slippery. It was an excellent welcome home gift for those old folks who sneak off to Florida to escape Maine winters.

Clean Up Day got a lot of work done around the Town Office and the boat ramp. Litter was picked up, trees trimmed, leaves raked, branches hauled off and the lawn was mowed. Participating were Bruce Powell, Bob Fortin and his tractor, Pat Monroe, Rita Aromaa, Norman Ferguson, Deidre O'Callaghan and Clem Worcester. Thanks, Deidre, for lunch.

Rumford Fire Department responded to a burning branch that came in contact with wires along Main Street on Tuesday.

Now open for business. On Wednesday, May 15, Debbie and Duke Dupont opened their antique store for the first time. The store, the former Knights of Pythias Hall at 2074 Main Street, has been undergoing alterations since it was purchased last winter.

I received my June issue of National Geographic magazine a couple days ago. The article featured on the cover is "D-Day," appropriate for Memorial Day weekend. I read this article and found several interesting facts or incidents that I had not previously known. One of these was a "live fire exercise" and practice landing and beach assault conducted on a beach in England in April 1944, just a few weeks before D-Day. This exercise involved some 30,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen and turned out to be a disaster, when over 900 people were killed. After this fiasco, General Eisenhower was deeply worried about the upcoming Normandy invasion.

I highly recommend the June "Geographic" article for the above story and several other incidents related to D-Day. It helps the reader develop a feeling for the scope of effort and sacrifice our troops and the Navy "Sons of Beaches" faced in overcoming the complex and exceedingly dangerous system of defenses both in the water and on the shorelands abutting the Normandy beaches. I hope these reminders help motivate more of our readers to appreciate the supreme sacrifices made by so many of our service men and women over the years on this weekend's Memorial Day.

On a brighter note, we seem to be getting a little warmer and dryer weather to help motivate all us gardeners to get out and get our hands dirty. My early peas and spinach are just sitting there waiting for the sun to come out.

Last weekend, Mona and I hosted her great-grandson, Boston, from Saturday morning until Sunday evening. I had forgotten how much work and effort goes into watching out for a two-year-old. Boston is a very good boy, but his attention span lasts for about 15 seconds. Then it is time for something else. I found out he does love to go down by the brook and throw rocks and sticks into the water (no surprise here.). Snuffy also likes to go along, wade in the water, and chase the rock splashes. There is also just enough sand to make little roads for a dump truck and to keep Boston busy "shoveling." There is a magical attraction that water, sand and rocks hold for young kids of all ages.

The Way I See It

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published by special arrangement with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

I think that hairstyles for both men and women are at their all-time best in the new millennium. Though short hair seems to be the current trend, collar length or long hair are equally in for both sexes. But the main theme is "keep it simple," and I like that.

My daughter was visiting the other day and I was watching her brushing her hair. She moaned and groaned that, "My hair won't do anything right," but the simple truth is that she has collar-length hair that she can wear down, up, part of it pulled back or all of it pulled back. She can, in fact, do just about anything with it.

I said nothing because I had vowed I would never hit my kids with, "You think you have it bad. Back in my day..." Haven't we all heard how our parents walked five miles or more to school in a raging blizzard up hill both ways or how our mothers or grandmothers had to wash clothes by banging them on rocks down at the "ole" creek? If I were one of those parents I would have told her that back in my day when I was her age things were a lot different.

Back in my day was the mid-60's when bouffants and beehives were the hairstyles of the day right along with buck bags and angora sweaters. Strict adherence to those styles was a must or you were nowhere.

If you tell a kid of today that you "teased" your hair, they will look at you like you're crazy. I can just hear them, "Sure, what did you do, hide the comb or call your hair names?"

Teasing hair was an act of self-torture that all us girls of the 60's had to endure to create the bouffant or beehive that we just had to have. We started the process just as kids of today do, by shampooing, but that's where the similarity ends.

We didn't have blow dryers or curling irons - we had "brush rollers." Only on Saturdays could we enjoy the luxury of drying our hair, which was accomplished by being attached to the dryer with a long, flexible hose and a plastic cap on our heads. With our tresses rolled tightly in the "brush rollers," drying was a time-consuming ordeal.

It was, however, a much better option than what we had to live with during the week, which was to curl our hair at night, and that meant sleeping on the "brush rollers."

Unless you have ever experienced it, you can't even begin to understand what it is like to sleep with bristles and plastic picks sticking into your scalp. I won't even try to describe it because I could not do justice to the pain and discomfort, but I'm sure there are a few readers that know what I am talking about.

When morning came, the hair, if you were lucky, was dry and it was time to take the rollers out, or more precisely, rip the rollers out, because they never just came out. Then it was brush, tease, style and spray. Pretty simple, huh?

To tease the hair you took some hair in hand, extended it out with the hand as far as it would go. With the other hand you would take a comb; it had to be a pretty sturdy comb, and run it through the hair making downward strokes toward the scalp from the end of the extended hair. When this was done, you repeated the process until there was not a strand unteased.

My mother used to say I was making rat's nests on my head, and I suppose there had been any around they would have found my hair quite inviting.

After the hair was all teased, you brushed and styled, very gently, very, very gently. The goal was to create a smooth, sleek look with the outer hair to conceal the teasing. I usually wore my hair in a beehive which meant pulling the hair back from both sides of the face and twisting one side over the other and rolling it into place and holding it there with a million bobby pins. Do bobby pins still exist? Anyway, after the rolling, tucking and pinning came the hair spray, lots of hair spray, and if there happened to be a special occasion, one could add glitter that would stick to the hair by adding more hair spray.

If this was done right, especially the teasing and brushing part, when you were done you had "height." I was pretty good at it and my hair was usually taller than I was.

I almost forgot about the "spit curls" and clip-on bows. You had to have spit curls which were half-moon type curls in front of each ear and stuck to the side of your face (more hair spray) to which you would attach a pretty little clip on bow that would color coordinate with whatever you were wearing.

What a terrible thing to go through every day you might be thinking to yourself, and of course you would be right. But the real terror came when you had to comb all of that mess out. I'm surprised that I have any hair left at all. I used to go roller-skating every Sunday night and the dust caused by the floor wax would stick to my hair along with the hair spray and glitter. Combing such a mess usually led to tears.

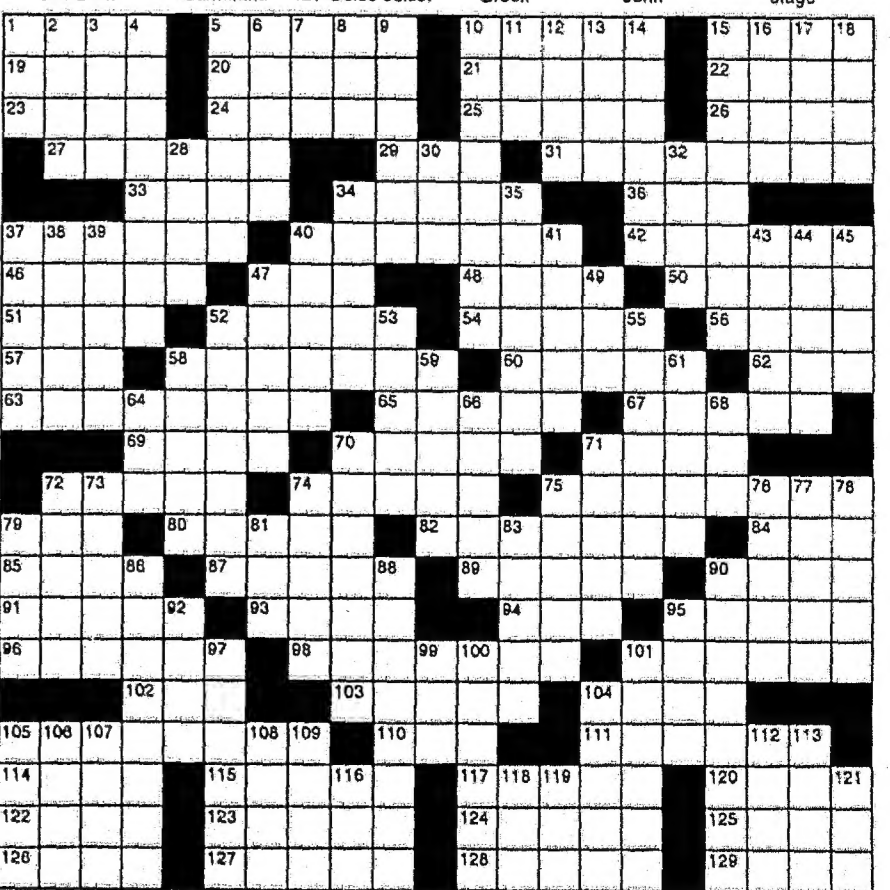

The men may laugh about all of this, but they were not exempt from subjecting themselves to hairstyling rituals with their DA's and flattops. My brother spent more time than I did in front of the mirror with his Brylcreem, "a little dab will do ya." He had so much grease and water on his hair that when he walked to school in the winter, he had icicles on his flattop when he got there. And no guy ever went anywhere without a comb in his back pocket which he would pull out and flip through his hair whenever he passed a mirror.

A lot of changes have taken place in hairstyles over the years and we have lived through long, short, teasing, crew cuts, spikes and Mohawks. We have gone beyond the day-glow colors and are now into lightening bolts on the sides and multiple day-glow colors. That's progress? Some men now get their hair done at beauty parlors, though they prefer to say unisex salons. Blow dryers, curling irons, mousse and gel are the hair care products of the day and hopefully a lot easier on the scalp.

The way I see it, the God of Hair is much kinder than when I was a teenager and I like it that way. When I get my hair done I just tell whoever is cutting it to do whatever they think will look good just as long as they don't "tease" it.

Diary

the age of 23. The palm-sized diary, said Fuller, "was hard to read. Some of it wasn't written under the best of conditions."

He went through the diary without correcting spelling or punctuation, a common practice for those compiling such diaries, he said. It gives the reader "a feel for the time and circumstance," said Fuller.

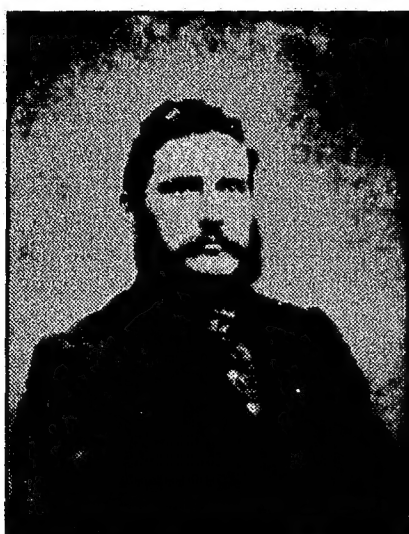

In most cases, Perkins' entries were brief, but Fuller provides the reader with more context by including information from other sources, much of it obtained through the Maine State Library.

Perkins' very first entry came in the aftermath of the First Battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861. "Battle of bulls run and was repulsed," he wrote.

Adds Fuller, "The Maine units under Col. Oliver Howard's Brigade, were committed to the fray, but they were so exhausted from their long marches at the double quick in the extreme heat, with no food or adequate water, they could barely walk, much less fight. Nearly half of the regiments were lost to fatigue on the march to the battlefield."

In another entry on June 7, 1862, Perkins wrote: "On picket on the outskirts plain in sight of the rebels one 3 (1/3?) of a mile Fort darling taken with 3,700 prisoners"

Adds Fuller, "The Union pickets and the Confederate pickets were very close to each other in this area. The troops from both sides would often, at times like this, take the opportunity to talk to each other and trade goods. Usually the trade was Union coffee for Confederate tobacco. This practice was frowned on by officers on both sides, but was generally overlooked. The next day they would go back to trying to kill each other."

Fuller said he would change a word in Perkins' writings only if it was otherwise too confusing for the reader. Any changes appear in parentheses.

Fuller got to know Perkins' style, and used it to help "translate." For example, he said, "I'd look for how he made his 'g's'."

But some of the information escaped him, too. "I'd study a sentence for an hour sometimes. But there were some words I just couldn't get. It's all there — you just couldn't read it."

Fuller also includes 10 letters written by Perkins, which provide much more detail than the diary. In an 1861 letter from Alexandria, Va., Perkins writes his mother asking how the farm crops are doing.

"How do the crops look and how many eggs have you sold and how many chickens have you raised this year Eggs are worth 36 cts. per doz here and milk from ten to fifth cents a quart."

Wounded

Late in the war, on March 25, 1865, near Petersburg, Va., Perkins wrote the following: "We packed up this morning. This afternoon we attacked the rebels in front of Fort Fisher and drove them back. I was wounded about 4 1/2 P.M."

With no further details, Fuller had to resort to the pension records of Perkins to find out more about his wound. (These were obtained through an acquaintance Fuller contacted on the Internet, in a Civil War chatroom.)

Fuller learned Perkins was struck in the chest by a bouncing cannonball as he lay on the ground, breaking several ribs.

According to the pension record, "That the ribs thus broken off have fallen in, compressing the lungs, causing much pain and difficulty in breathing. There is much numbness and loss of power or motion in the left side and limbs, by reason whereof he is disabled for manual labor."

Perkins' granddaughters, said Fuller, can remember him as an old man, his walk and posture still affected by the wound.

Perkins was in the army hospital for some time, and on April 8, shook the hand of President Abraham Lincoln when the president visited wounded soldiers.

Six days later, Lincoln was assassinated.

"The President was shot this evening about 10 by a villain," wrote Perkins in his April 14 diary entry.

Perkins left the service in June, arriving back in Portland July 2, to make his final diary entry: "We got to Portland at two this morning and got Breakfast and marched out to Camp Berry."

He returned to Oxford and still managed to farm and do carpentry despite his wound. He died in 1930.

After two years of research, "It's just like I knew him," said Fuller.

At the beginning of his book, Fuller writes, "To hold in my hand the original diary written by a soldier who was in the First Battle of Bull Run, took part in Burnside's infamous 'Mud March,' was wounded at Fort Fisher, shook hands with President Abraham Lincoln, spent nearly four years out in the rain, snow, sun and mud, and did his duty with hardly a complaint, just sends shivers down my spine. Thank God for Otis and the many thousands like him."

The book on Perkins is available at Books 'n Things in Oxford and Maine Line Products in Locke Mills.

Fuller is planning another diary compilation, this one on an army assistant surgeon from Standish. He expects it to take another two years.

classmates to address them at commencement. He has been active in the drama program at Gould, and as a member of the soccer and lacrosse teams. He was recently elected to the National Honor Society and will continue his education at Yale University in the fall.

On Friday afternoon, the Rev. Brendon Bass will deliver the invocation at Gould's traditional baccalaureate ceremonies at the West Parish Congregational Church. Senior Megan Holtham will present the class banner, and the graduating class has selected classmate Gregory Perchik and faculty members Bradford Clarke and Erik Janicki to address them.

Perchik has attended Gould for four years, and will continue his studies at the Queens University in the fall. He is a student proctor and has been active in Gould's music program and as a member of the Outing Club and snowboard and tennis teams. He is the son of Lawrence and Sandra Perchik of West

Boxford, Mass.

Janicki is a graduate of Gould Academy's Class of 1991. He has taught biology and ecology at the school for seven years, and was instrumental in the development of the Farm and Forest Program. He is departing at the end of the current school year to continue his education at the University of New Hampshire, where he will pursue a master's degree in microbiology.

Clarke has taught history at Gould for five years, including such senior elective courses as Eastern Religions and Islam Today. He holds a Ph.D. in political science from Brandeis University.

On Friday evening, the Gould music department, under the direction of James McLaughlin III, will present its annual spring concert in Bingham Auditorium. The concert, which begins at 8 p.m., will feature both instrumental and vocal selections. It is open to the public and there is no charge for admission.

Cats

rounded up.

But even in those rare cases, the problem does not stop there.

"Our biggest problem with the cats is what we do with them once we catch them," Tripp said.

There are few places willing to take the cats, Tripp said.

"Presently the only place we have been able to find that will accept cats is Responsible Pet Care in Norway."

And as the number of cats involved in a situation increases, the number of options for disposing of them humanely decreases.

In an earlier case Responsible Pet Care was reluctant to accept six cats, Tripp said, but they eventually agreed to.

"But," he said, "when you're talking 12, 15, 20 cats, there's no place in the world that will take them," Tripp told the selectmen.

And even in situation where a shelter can be found, the cats must be taken to a veterinarian, examined, and either given shots or euthanized.

All told, Tripp said, the cost to Bethel amounts to at least $71 per cat, often more.

"A typical situation is 10 to a dozen cats," he said, "and at $80 each that's $1,000."

And it isn't just the money, he told the selectmen, it's the general frustration of attempting to deal with the conditions out of which such problems often arise.

"The central problem is the house," he said.

Town Manager Scott Cole agreed, but noted there is little the town can do in such situations, especially since they are largely not addressed in town ordinances.

"There's a presumed right to live in squalor," he said.

Tripp said later that the problem of nuisance cats is statewide. Animal Control Officer Ozzie Hart is contacting other ACOs, Tripp said, and attempting to see if there is some way to press for a statewide solution.

Bethel

by Virginia Keniston

Bethel certainly has its share of birds this spring. Sighted at a Bethel residence from 5 to 6 a.m. on Tuesday, May 21, were the following birds: orioles, blue jays, mourning doves, goldfinches, purple finches, a female black-throated blue warbler, downy and hairy woodpeckers, song sparrow, white-crown sparrow, robins, chickadees, hummingbirds, chipping sparrows, catbirds, cowbirds, a brown thrasher, white-throat sparrows, tree sparrows, evening grosbeaks, pigeons, grackles, tree swallows, and heard were crows, a flicker and a phoebe. A deer, several chipmunks, a woodchuck and a gray squirrel rounded out the count. Both nuthatches were seen later in the morning.

Rick and Melissa Young of Bryant Pond and Jane Young of Bethel spent the week in Portland, Ore., and attended Laurie Young's graduation from Lewis and Clarke University. She received a master's degree in sociology and anthropology. She plans to spend the summer white water rafting in Oregon and in the fall will pursue further studies in New Zealand.

On Saturday, the Androscoggin Chorale held a concert at the Norway Congregational Church. Amy Davis attended this concert, as her daughter, Susan White, was a member of the group.

Muriel Butters spent the weekend in Bar Harbor visiting Bruce and Lottie Stevens and sons, Aaron, Alex and Adam.

Bud and Shirley Clough are at home in West Bethel after spending the winter in Florida.

Harry and Barbara Kuzyk recently returned to their Bethel home after spending the winter in Florida.

Allen and Jackie Cressy spent the weekend in Concord, N.H., helping Al's parents move to a new apartment. It snowed heavily during much of the move, but the gray day was made much brighter when Jackie found her mother-in-law's diamond ring that had been missing for several years.

On Saturday, May 11, Lindley

and Pauline Wieden drove to Presque Isle to attend their 61st class reunion of the graduating class at Aroostook State Normal School, now the University of Maine in Presque Isle. On the return trip, on Sunday, they stopped at the home of their daughter and husband, Catherine and Thomas Sands, in Dover-Foxcroft for a Mother's Day cookout. The Sands' three children, Amber, Seth and Joshua were all there. Another daughter, Priscilla Hansen, who also lives in Dover-Foxcroft, came over with her four daughters, Ashley, Jennie, Emily and Anna. A lovely time was shared by all.

On Friday evening, May 10, the Wiedens' eldest daughter and husband, Sylvia and Blaine Miller of Norridgewock, came and took them out for an early Mother's Day dinner.

Dates to remember at Crescent Park School: May 30, Grade Five travels to Boston and returns on May 31; June 5 is Step-Up Day; June 6, Grade Five has Celebration Night; and June 11 is the last day of school.

Sunday River Valley

Amidst the snow and the cold, nature still knows that it is spring. The songbirds are back and they're still chirping, even though it is cold. The turkeys are in evidence along the roads, flying and doing their odd little run. I saw a groundhog the other day. I was just looking out the window and saw something moving in the woods. I was not clear it was real, until it ran. I have yet to see a deer or moose this spring. That, too, will come.

Am attempting to get back into my workout routine. It is amazing how easy it is to get out of a routine, and how difficult it is to get back into it. Last week, with a little help, I actually made it to the gym, twice. Maybe this week I can try for three times. Tasha would prefer I did outside time, instead, but with the rain, I've been negligent on that score.

Mike Liberti has returned from Bolivia looking tanned and in very good spirits. Hope he and Dave Nivus had a great time. Sounds like the trip was good.

Thursday (the 23rd) is the 6th anniversary of the Bethel Area Poets Society. Although in a lull, right now, we are more than welcome to new poets. Anyone with any interest, should give us a call at 824-3427, or join us at the Black Bear B&B from 7 to 9 p.m. tonight. Bring your favorite poems, read your own poems, or just come to listen.

The hour gets late and I must get ready for work. Have a good week, stay safe and come join us for an evening of poetry.

It started snowing in the late afternoon on Monday, May 13, after two days of rain.

By the next morning several inches had accumulated. The rain continued most of the day Tuesday and patches of snow remained on the ground until the end of the week. A power failure Monday evening, that lasted about an hour, was blamed on the heavy snow and roads were reported to be very slippery. It was an excellent welcome home gift for those old folks who sneak off to Florida to escape Maine winters.

Clean Up Day got a lot of work done around the Town Office and the boat ramp. Litter was picked up, trees trimmed, leaves raked, branches hauled off and the lawn was mowed. Participating were Bruce Powell, Bob Fortin and his tractor, Pat Monroe, Rita Aromaa, Norman Ferguson, Deidre O'Callaghan and Clem Worcester. Thanks, Deidre, for lunch.

Rumford Fire Department responded to a burning branch that came in contact with wires along Main Street on Tuesday.

Now open for business. On Wednesday, May 15, Debbie and Duke Dupont opened their antique store for the first time. The store, the former Knights of Pythias Hall at 2074 Main Street, has been undergoing alterations since it was purchased last winter.

I received my June issue of National Geographic magazine a couple days ago. The article featured on the cover is "D-Day," appropriate for Memorial Day weekend. I read this article and found several interesting facts or incidents that I had not previously known. One of these was a "live fire exercise" and practice landing and beach assault conducted on a beach in England in April 1944, just a few weeks before D-Day. This exercise involved some 30,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen and turned out to be a disaster, when over 900 people were killed. After this fiasco, General Eisenhower was deeply worried about the upcoming Normandy invasion.

I highly recommend the June "Geographic" article for the above story and several other incidents related to D-Day. It helps the reader develop a feeling for the scope of effort and sacrifice our troops and the Navy "Sons of Beaches" faced in overcoming the complex and exceedingly dangerous system of defenses both in the water and on the shorelands abutting the Normandy beaches. I hope these reminders help motivate more of our readers to appreciate the supreme sacrifices made by so many of our service men and women over the years on this weekend's Memorial Day.

On a brighter note, we seem to be getting a little warmer and dryer weather to help motivate all us gardeners to get out and get our hands dirty. My early peas and spinach are just sitting there waiting for the sun to come out.

Last weekend, Mona and I hosted her great-grandson, Boston, from Saturday morning until Sunday evening. I had forgotten how much work and effort goes into watching out for a two-year-old. Boston is a very good boy, but his attention span lasts for about 15 seconds. Then it is time for something else. I found out he does love to go down by the brook and throw rocks and sticks into the water (no surprise here.). Snuffy also likes to go along, wade in the water, and chase the rock splashes. There is also just enough sand to make little roads for a dump truck and to keep Boston busy "shoveling." There is a magical attraction that water, sand and rocks hold for young kids of all ages.

The Way I See It

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published by special arrangement with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

I think that hairstyles for both men and women are at their all-time best in the new millennium. Though short hair seems to be the current trend, collar length or long hair are equally in for both sexes. But the main theme is "keep it simple," and I like that.

My daughter was visiting the other day and I was watching her brushing her hair. She moaned and groaned that, "My hair won't do anything right," but the simple truth is that she has collar-length hair that she can wear down, up, part of it pulled back or all of it pulled back. She can, in fact, do just about anything with it.

I said nothing because I had vowed I would never hit my kids with, "You think you have it bad. Back in my day..." Haven't we all heard how our parents walked five miles or more to school in a raging blizzard up hill both ways or how our mothers or grandmothers had to wash clothes by banging them on rocks down at the "ole" creek? If I were one of those parents I would have told her that back in my day when I was her age things were a lot different.

Back in my day was the mid-60's when bouffants and beehives were the hairstyles of the day right along with buck bags and angora sweaters. Strict adherence to those styles was a must or you were nowhere.

If you tell a kid of today that you "teased" your hair, they will look at you like you're crazy. I can just hear them, "Sure, what did you do, hide the comb or call your hair names?"

Teasing hair was an act of self-torture that all us girls of the 60's had to endure to create the bouffant or beehive that we just had to have. We started the process just as kids of today do, by shampooing, but that's where the similarity ends.

We didn't have blow dryers or curling irons - we had "brush rollers." Only on Saturdays could we enjoy the luxury of drying our hair, which was accomplished by being attached to the dryer with a long, flexible hose and a plastic cap on our heads. With our tresses rolled tightly in the "brush rollers," drying was a time-consuming ordeal.

It was, however, a much better option than what we had to live with during the week, which was to curl our hair at night, and that meant sleeping on the "brush rollers."

Unless you have ever experienced it, you can't even begin to understand what it is like to sleep with bristles and plastic picks sticking into your scalp. I won't even try to describe it because I could not do justice to the pain and discomfort, but I'm sure there are a few readers that know what I am talking about.

When morning came, the hair, if your were lucky, was dry and it was time to take the rollers out, or more precisely, rip the rollers out, because they never just came out. Then it was brush, tease, style and spray. Pretty simple, huh?

To tease the hair you took some hair in hand, extended it out with the hand as far as it would go. With the other hand you would take a comb; it had to be a pretty sturdy comb, and run it through the hair making downward strokes toward the scalp from the end of the extended hair. When this was done, you repeated the process until there was not a strand unteased.

My mother used to say I was making rat's nests on my head, and I suppose if there had been any around they would have found my hair quite inviting.

After the hair was all teased, you brushed and styled, very gently, very gently. The goal was to create a smooth, sleek look with the outer hair to conceal the teasing. I usually wore my hair in a beehive which meant pulling the hair back from both sides of the face and twisting one side over the other and rolling it into place and holding it there with a million bobby pins. Do bobby pins still exist? Anyway, after the rolling, tucking and pinning came the hair spray, lots of hair spray, and if there happened to be a special occasion, one could add glitter that would stick to the hair by adding more hair spray.

If this was done right, especially the teasing and brushing part, when you were done you had "height." I was pretty good at it and my hair was usually taller than I was.

I almost forgot about the "spit curls" and clip-on bows. You had to have spit curls which were half-moon type curls in front of each ear and stuck to the side of your face (more hair spray) to which you would attach a pretty little clip on bow that would color coordinate with whatever you were wearing.

What a terrible thing to go through every day you might be thinking to yourself, and of course you would be right. But the real terror came when you had to comb all of that mess out. I'm surprised that I have any hair left at all. I used to go roller-skating every Sunday night and the dust caused by the floor wax would stick to my hair along with the hair spray and glitter. Combing such a mess usually led to tears.

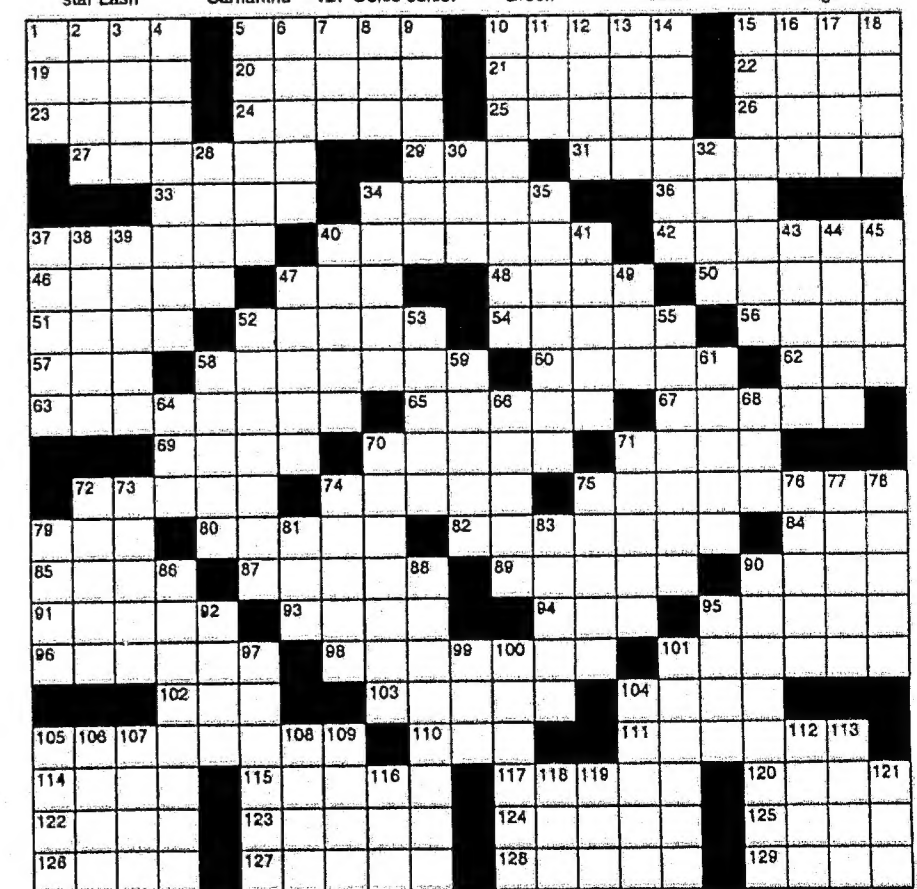

The men may laugh about all of this, but they were not exempt from subjecting themselves to hairstyling rituals with their DA's and flattops. My brother spent more time than I did in front of the mirror with his Brylcreem, "a little dab will do ya." He had so much grease and water on his hair that when he walked to school in the winter, he had icicles on his flattop when he got there. And no guy ever went anywhere without a comb in his back pocket which he would pull out and flip through his hair whenever he passed a mirror.

A lot of changes have taken place in hairstyles over the years and we have lived through long, short, teasing, crew cuts, spikes and Mohawks. We have gone beyond the day-glow colors and are now into lightening bolts on the sides and multiple day-glow colors. That's progress? Some men now get their hair done at beauty parlors, though they prefer to say unisex salons. Blow dryers, curling irons, mousse and gel are the hair care products of the day and hopefully a lot easier on the scalp.

The way I see it, the God of Hair is much kinder than when I was a teenager and I like it that way. When I get my hair done I just tell whoever is cutting it to do whatever they think will look good just as long as they don't "tease" it.

that brought them here. They seem to be in a holding pattern. The weather up north must be worse than here. Bird brains are smarter than ours. There are very few leaves on the shrubs and trees, making for clearer visibility. Whatever it is, they are eating us out of house and home. The telephone has been very busy with reports of unusual bird sightings, and these folks are pretty "bird savvy." East "B" Hill, Back Street, Thistle Street and down on the lake have been host to some wonderful feathered friends.

Jeanette Roy gave me a list of 23 different birds. The Rectors, the Roy and the Angevines have been having routine visits from the orioles. These birds have devoured many oranges, right down to the rind. Marty Edwards has identified a Wood Thrush feeding in her dooryard. She also has five deer casually dropping by. Down on the lake we are plagued with flocks of beautiful squawking blue jays. There isn't anyone that remembers seeing such large numbers in the area. The warblers are passing through on schedule. We are on the Eastern Flyway for warblers, according to William Brewster's "Birds of Lake Umbagog."

The cold put the bug population on hold so the birds are visiting the peanut butter feeders.

Buster Williamson, Richard and I watched a Black-throated Blue Warbler devouring peanut butter on Sunday. He is a very small, beautiful little guy. His back is very dark blue. The throat and head are black, and the under parts are pure white. A small white dot is at the distal part of his wings. Evelyn Kenney and Ginny Williamson have had visits from the same bird.

The selectmen met at the Town Office this week and the salted sand shed was the major topic discussed.

The Scenic Byway Committee met on May 16. Members present were: Chairman Mike Broderick, Sue Nelson, Grafton Park Ranger John Metcalf, Sylvia Gray, Audrey Brooks and Ellie LeComte. It was a very interesting meeting. Signage to be placed along the route was discussed. Informational and historical signs were studied. The signs will be placed at strategic places along Route 26 at Bear River, Grafton State Park, the site of the former town of Grafton and the Appalachian Trail. Grafton held particular interest to the group since this once thriving little town is a place with no residents, but a heck of a lot of trees. The area was geographically unsuited for supporting human life. Farming and forestry were its only assets. Frosts 12 months of the year and intensive tree harvesting made it a town destined for a poor future. An occasional stone foundation or lilac bush are all that is left of what was home to 115 people in 1880. The cemetery is a bleak reminder that this was so. The trees are growing back. It is a wildflower delight and home to our moose in the summer months. They will state this on the signage but in a lot fewer words than "yours truly" is capable of. We hope the signs will be erected some time this season.

This is part of what living in a small town means. In my
May 9th column I asked if anyone had a refrigerator that they would care to donate to The Friends of the Town Hall. Later that same week, Peggy Madigan, who is one of the "Friends" was at work when this couple came in and asked her what kind of refrigerator she wanted because they were on their way over to buy one and wanted to make sure they got what she needed. Can you believe that? Thank you Pete and Wanda Coolidge, your generosity is totally, totally "cool." The new upstairs kitchen at the Town Hall is going to be great.

And that's not all, Cindy Gammon's father, Thomas Conley, of Rumford, has also donated a used refrigerator; so within two weeks, thanks to the generosity of wonderful Andover citizens our Town Hall is going to be able to keep things "chillin'" all summer.

Baccalaureate Sunday at the Andover Congregational Church will be this Sunday, May 26 at 10 a.m. All seniors should be at the church by 9:45 please.

Don't forget that the Andover Alumni Banquet is this Saturday, May 25, at the Grammar School Gym. Happy Hour at five; Dinner at six. See you there.

Has anyone in the area seen a Nodding Trillium? Penny Poor has found one and wants to know if there are more. I guess this is a rare flower, and would you please call Penny at 392-1502 if you have sighted any. It's a miracle that any flower is blooming now because of Old Man Winter refusing to go away, just go away. This time last year the lilacs were out. Believe me I'm so glad to see any flowers at all that even the Dandy Lions look really nice to me this year. Why do people hate Dandy Lions anyway? I think they give a lawn sparkle, all green can be pretty dull if you think about it.

Phyllis and Leon Simmons are back from wintering in Florida; I hope they brought some warm days with them.

Okay, the next question that I'm going to ask is very, very, very important, so heads up. Who killed Jordan's mother? Was anyone lucky enough to see last week's TV show Crossing Jordan? It was the season finale and of course our cable went out and I missed it. I am so mad — Monday night is just about the only night I watch TV. I like Third Watch and of course Crossing Jordan and missed both final episodes. As a matter of fact, last Monday evening was really the pits for me come to think of it. I missed my shows; the number for Adelphia is 1-800-336-8899 by the way. I know it by heart because I must have called it about 20 times — always busy, busy. Anyway, since I couldn't watch TV, I decided to play Solitaire on the computer and guess what, I was winning over $700 when the lights went out. Now this never happens, me winning that much at Solitaire I mean, the lights go out at least once a week, so I lost over 700 pretend dollars, don't know who killed Jordan's mother, and am running low on candles, but I'm having fun.

Birthdays for the following week include Lauren Grace Sterling, Ida Davis and Barb Sabin on the 24th, Marty Morgan, Thomas Morton and Lisa Young on the 25th, Cassidy Mosher and Nicole Ripper on the 26th, Paula Smith, Jim Coolidge, and Amy Thurston on the 27th, A.J. Carrier, Jim Bodwell, and Stacey Chenery on the 28th. Josh Palmer, Darryl Wells and Cheryl Morin on the 29th, and Brock Jolicœur on the 30th. Happy Birthday everyone. David and Philena will celebrate an anniversary on the 29th. Philena, you deserve a gold medal.

The word of the week is "casuistry." Look it up. Have a safe and happy Memorial Day. See "ya."

Andy and I were in Lewiston Tuesday and had lunch with Fritz and Norma Peterson and May Millard, Norma's daughter, and then took May to CMMC where she was undergoing tests. She said she passed out during a routine mammogram and when she woke up four doctors were standing around her bed and all her children were there — six, I believe. Anyhow, now they are trying to determine just what caused what they believe was a small stroke. It complicates things that she has multiple sclerosis. When I called Thursday evening she was going in for an MRI at 7:30 p.m., which seems an odd time to be going unless it was on an emergency basis. Since she needed to go right off, I didn't hold her. I will find out in due time, I'm sure. When we were there Tuesday, Norma had just had laser surgery on her right eye. She said after we left she slept all afternoon; not surprising, since any procedure done when one is 88 must be very tiring.

I had my annual checkup Friday and Wednesday went for a battery of blood tests after a 14-hour fast. The wit in the lab said the doctor might just as well have checked all of them, it wouldn't have taken any more blood. The person who took the blood was very good. I hardly felt anything and it did not leave its usual black and blue spot.

Even though it has been a weird spring, we have many more birds this year than last. We have swallows vying for our two birdhouses. There is the resident pair of Canada geese, at least two, and maybe up to four nesting mallard ladies and this year there are three mallard drakes coming to feed. There is one pair of wood ducks and a couple buffleheads. They are so cute and have a long, pointed bill. Today, we got an influx of birds, three kinds of sparrows, juncos, finches and I think chickadees. I was sure there were chickadees because I heard their call, until I realized it was my bird clock telling me it was two o'clock. We already have blackbirds nesting across the way. Of course the babies may all be brought out in the midst of a snowstorm. Who knows these days.

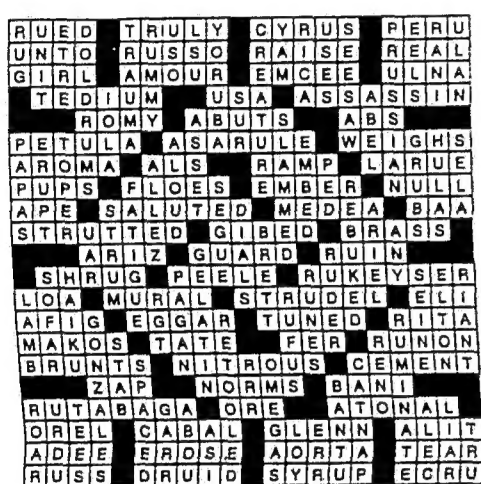

I talked with Marcia today, as I wanted to find out how she is enjoying jury duty. She said so far she hasn't sat on any but is going to Houlton to serve there. She wasn't very happy to have to travel the 40 miles; but at least she can stay with her in-laws. It was really sort of weird. She had to change her vacation here to an earlier date because of jury duty. My cousin, Frank Flint, planned to come to Maine in two weeks and he just got called for jury duty then. Must be something that runs in the family.

I thought I'd be smart and do my news on the computer but I could not get the margins right and one line might take off all by itself and put itself in a wrong place. No doubt if I knew what to tell it to do it might be better, but it seemed to have ideas of its own. Clippit tried to help and, although I enjoy his antics, his ideas didn't help much. I tried one suggestion I got in computer class, which worked perfectly well there, but completely deleted everything I had written when I tried it here at home. I guess it is time to holler for help from my sister-in-law, Callie Colby. Since she is closer than Ralph or Marcia, she is often called on to get me out of my tight spots.

I was very sorry to hear about the death of Travis Buck. Travis grew up around here and it is always difficult when those we watched Sympathy is extended to the family of Merle Ring.

On Mother's Day, the family of Beatrice Farnum met at Beth, Steve and Marybeth Hoover's for a cook-out and potluck. Those present were Leatrice and John Chase; Althea, Robert, Jennifer and Daniel Stevens; Richard, Teresa, Michael and Hunter Chase; Andrew, Rhonda and Liza Chase and Rhonda's parents, Alice and Ken Hoyt; Beatrice Farnum; Beth, Steve and Marybeth Hoover; JoAnn, David, Ray and Shawn Crockett; and Robert Hoyt. A good time was had by all.

Remember the Memorial Day program, sponsored by the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War at the honor roll on Monday, May 27 at 1 p.m., will be a parade to cemetery and back, speaker, band, essay by school children, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and General Logan's Orders.

Greenwood City

Once again Mother's Day has been celebrated. How fortunate people are that still have their mothers to enjoy.

Leonas and Fay Holt, their daughter, Ann Paine, and David and Sally Holt and their daughter, May, all enjoyed Mother's Day having dinner at the Trolley House in Norway. Then they went over to see Colista Morgan. She is same as usual.

Eleanor and Milton Inman, their son, Gary, and his girls, Calli and Ani, went down to Gray to the Animal Park. They had a picnic lunch and enjoyed the day.

Lillian and Glenn Strait and Colista and Stephen Cogswell from Freeport brought their campers up and had their first camping trip for the season. Had a large crowd here on Saturday. There were 27 including six of my children, their husbands, wives and children and also several friends. We had a buffet lunch.

Tuesday, my oldest son, Walter, came from Kingsbury for a short visit. My son, Kenneth, called me from Kentucky. Always glad to hear from them.

We had to have some more snow, but of course it didn't last. It sure rained hard later so it didn't last.

Marie and Akala, her granddaughter, and I went to Auburn today. We had errands to do. It was very windy and cool.

Carl Curtis was home for the weekend. He had to go back Sunday in the storm.

Everyone have a good week.

South Woodstock

by Andrea Wing
Much sympathy to the family and friends of Merle Ring Sr., who died this past week.

Merle was well known in Woodstock and other areas and will be missed by all who knew him.

A good crowd attended the 40th year in business party held at Hadley's Garage in South Woodstock. The business is owned by Erlon and MaudeAlice Hadley. Many attended to wish them luck in the future and visit for a while. Congratulations.

Carol Hall of Phippsburg, previously from this area, had a harrowing experience about a week ago. Carol works at the Gardiner Savings Bank in Bath. A man came into the bank demanding money from Carol at gunpoint. She told him she didn't have any so he went to another employee who worked there and she gave him some money. He was caught a while later.

On Mother's Day, our son and wife, Rick and Sally Wing, Bridgeton, came over for a visit. Later in the day our daughter and husband, Kellie and Brad Record and my great-grandson, Zachary, came by for a Mother's Day visit. We had a good time catching up a bit.

I received calls around Mother's Day from my sisters, Dotte Critser, Tempe, Ariz., and Evelyn Dunn, Campton, N.H. wishing me a happy Mother's Day. It's nice to be remembered.

For Mother's Day, Dennis and Debbie Poland had their mothers, Tommy Poland and Pat Bedard, to their home for a lobster treat. Later they all went out for ice cream. All of Tommy's other four children stopped by sometime during the day.

Quote of the Week: "I've learned that horsepower is something that was much safer when only horses had it."

Jude and Peggy Lamb of Augusta had dinner with their mother, Joyce Lamb, on Mother's Day. Joyce reports that her great-grandson, Joshua Hysong, is well now. Mother Nina is back teaching and Joshua is going to daycare.

The Old Home Days will be in full swing starting on Friday night with a parade followed by a supper at the Historical Society building and dancing to the music of The Parisians after supper. The Goodwill Fellowship group will be selling fried dough during the weekend.

O'Neil Mills is recuperating at home following hip surgery.

Eleanor Bunker and son, Steve, of North Conway, N.H., have been visiting her sister, Lee Dean.

Arnold and Sally Cram took his grandmother, Arlene Farr, and his mother, Maxine Cram, out to dinner on Mother's Day.

I hope the hummingbirds don't go to warmer places, due to the chilly weather. It was 30 degrees here this morning.

Deanna Waterhouse of South Paris was accepted at Northeastern University in Boston, Mass. This was Deanna's first choice and she will be attending the fall semester. She will graduate June 8 from Oxford Hills Comprehensive High School.

On Saturday, May 11, Deanna and friend, Brandon Hodgden, attended a 73rd birthday party/cookout for her grandfather, Pastor Lloyd Waterhouse, held at Gail Boutillier's home in West Paris. Happy Birthday, Lloyd.

On Tuesday, the Ladies Guild of West Paris Baptist Church met at the beautiful home of Maurice and Jim Veatch, High Street.

At noon on Thursday, the West Paris Agnes L. Gray School Glee Club performed at the Bryant Pond Senior Citizens lunch held at Franklin Grange Hall on Main Street.

In the afternoon of Thursday, Norway Grange held a marvelous Open House.

On Saturday, the Ladies Guild of the West Paris Baptist Church held their annual Mother-Daughter Banquet at Market Square Restaurant.

West Paris Grange 298 will hold their monthly public supper at their hall from 5 to 6 p.m. ($5 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12).

On Monday, May 27, the West Paris Memorial Day parade lineup will be at 10:30 a.m. with step-off time at 11 a.m. We will meet on Maple Street as usual. In case of rain, we shall meet at the West Paris Grange Hall on Church Street.

East Stoneham

by Eleanor Nelson
Hi readers. Once again I opened my big mouth and said I'd volunteer to campaign for the American Diabetes Association. By now, you should have gotten my letters to you, and thank you for responding. It is for a good cause, like cancer research and Red Cross. I've done this for several years now.

May 26 is Stoneham Church Memorial Day worship and special program put on by Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Hannah F. Richardson Tent 19.

Recently, Joel Barker got together with Boy Scout Troop 155 and cleaned up an old cemetery way in the woods in Stoneham. This is the Great Brook Cemetery and was in pretty bad shape and needed a lot of work. Many large trees had fallen on the path and in the cemetery and had to be removed and cleared away and stones to be straightened. This is part of Joel's Eagle Scout Project. There are about 18 boys from age 12 to 18 in this group and they learn to work together and develop leadership skills. This was quite a challenge and they have done a real good job. Community service is part of scouting. In three years they have had three Eagle Scouts, and Joel is well on his way to becoming one.

Oxford County Republicans met Tuesday, May 14, at the Wilkins House in Waterford with 5:30 p.m. social hour and 6:30 p.m. supper that was put on by the Hannibal Hamlin Women's Club, which was good as usual. Chairman Paul Billings introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Ed. McLaughlin of the Maine Economic Research Institute. Also speaking during the evening were Tom Winsor, Rob Cameron, Norm Ferguson, Ted Heidrich, Arlan Jodrey and Stavros Mendors. The next Oxford County Republican supper and meeting will be held at the Stoneham Congregational Church on June 4. Hope to see you all there. The supper is being put on by the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War Tent 19.

On May 26, Stoneham Rescue will be putting on their annual Pancake Breakfast at the Rescue Barn at 7 a.m. This is always good. See you there. They serve 7 to 10 a.m.

On May 15, nine members of the East Stoneham Congregational Church met at the vestry for regular meeting and to discuss the upcoming suppers for the summer. I believe the first one will be on July 11. The Thrift and Bake sales do start on June 1. These always do quite well thanks to all who work on them and to those who donate and come to buy the goodies.

The hummingbirds are here. I was ready for them this year.

Albany

by Dana & Sheila Dyke
Greetings from Albany. Despite colds and dreary weather, we hope that everyone had a wonderful weekend. It was very nice to see the sunshine this week, and we hope that spring will decide to stay and not dump any more snow on us.

Carlton Rugg is back home, at least until August when he goes back out to finish the Maine end of the Appalachian Trail. Until then, we're pretty sure that everyone will be keeping him busy until he leaves. Dana wants to go on the trip, too, but Carlton's planning on being out a month. While Dana can do it, Sheila would have a difficult time.

Annika Barton sang during church services, and Fellowship followed. Afterward, the Ladies Circle Meeting was held. During the meeting we discussed this summer's church suppers, yard sales, and other events that go on in Albany. Margaret Barton let us know that the first Albany yard sale (held at the Town Hall) will most likely be June 29th.

Annika Barton, Ashley Sabin, and Marissa Corriveau each celebrated birthdays this past week. Jeff and Sue Barton celebrated their 7th anniversary. Congratulations to everyone.

Many of the Youth Group and their families went out on Sunday to listen to Diane Muisse sing. Dyana came back and told us that they had a wonderful time, and that when Diane had the audience join in to sing "Jesus Loves Me" she noted that several, including Dyana, were singing in sign language, and she had them come up on stage to "sing" along. We had wanted to go as well, but we're two of those fighting colds and didn't feel up to it. We are hoping to get out to see her soon.

The Youth Group's closing will be this Friday at the church. They will sing a couple of songs and give testimony before their friends and families. There will also be refreshments. We hope that everyone will be able to make it out to see the kids. They've worked very hard this past season, and this means a lot to them — not only the finale to their meetings until school starts, but also the sharing of what this has meant to them. We hope that many of the kids will still participate in the Music Program (which now looks like there will be rehearsals on Sundays following church) as well as the other lessons we're planning for the summer. Holle Corriveau will be teaching us all how to sew, starting in a couple of weeks. On Saturday, the Youth Group will be going to Fun Town for Christian music and lots of fun (Jam Fest). A reminder to meet at the church at 8:30 on Saturday morning.

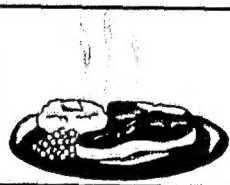

Best wishes for a happy and safe week.

our members and friends, a fabulous Silent Auction will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Dinner begins at 7 p.m. and the awards program will start at 8. This is a great evening of celebration and all are welcomed to come.

Many thanks to our faithful volunteers, Dave Freiday who recently spent a few hours in the office putting a new desk together, as well as Ginny Walker who helped us collate our May newsletter last week. We sure do appreciate the help.

From the Jackson-Silver Auxiliary

May 2 was the date for the Installation of Officers for the coming year. Before that ceremony, Amy Stevens, leader of Brownie Scout Troop 706 of Bryant Pond, several of her helpers and seven Brownies were recognized as guests, and a new United States flag and staff were presented to them as a gift from the auxiliary.

Jeri Greenwell, with the help of Ramona Grover, then installed Leah Deegan as president, Nancy Grover as 2nd vice president, Olive Risko as secretary, Florence (Honey) Bailey as treasurer, Helvi Cary as chaplain, Rowena Dunham as historian, Sylvia Dunham and Edith Morey as members of the executive committee.

At the meeting that followed, it was announced that those attending Girls State this year would be Kristina Koskela and Amanda Dunham, and a committee was appointed to review the applications for $500 in college scholarships. It was also learned that Sally Smith, with her daughter, Koral Kimball, Joan and Jillian Kimball had earned $300 for the March of Dimes with the cakes that they had been making and raffling each week.

Application for membership was received from Debra Vachon. When the unit met again, on May 16, Martha Stowell was installed as 1st vice president by Sylvia Dunham. Members accepted the recommendation of the Scholarship Committee and these will be presented by President Leah Deegan on June 4 at the Awards Night at the school.

Nancy Grover had baked many cookies for the gathering of Special Olympians in South Paris on June 4, and Sylvia Dunham and Olive Risko had attended a School of Instruction in Bethel on that date. They encourage other members to attend when more sessions are held. Also at this meeting a monetary gift was voted for each of the Junior members who are graduating from high school this year, and each Junior member who has recently turned 18 years old will have their dues paid for their first year as Senior members.

Members will be going to Newry Town Office on Sunday, May 26, for 11 a.m. Memorial Services. The next day, ceremonies begin at 8:40 a.m. at the Locke Mills Legion Hall, with the parade leaving at 9 a.m. to the Veterans' Memorial and Locke Mills cemetery. Coffee and doughnuts will be served afterward at the hall. This will be followed with services at East Bethel, and in the afternoon at Bryant Pond. Long-time Poppy Chairman Vera Cross and Miss Poppy, Hannah Lyon, will have the Memorial poppies available, and it is hoped that everyone will wear one to show their care.

The supper/dance held on May 14 was a success, and the auxiliary thanks so much the people who furnished door prizes. Another will be held on June 11 when the dance music will be by The Parisians.

From the Bethel Historical Society's Regional History Center

All SAD44 elementary students (Grades 1-6) are reminded that their entries must be at the Robinson House, 10 Broad Street, by 3 p.m. on Friday, May 24, to be considered for the 23rd annual Faye Taylor Memorial Art Show. All entries must relate in some way to the 2002 theme, "Celebration of the Horse in 19th Century Rural Life." All questions should be directed to the society office at 824-2908 or (800) 824-2910.

The Bethel Historical Society's annual St. Never's Day Sale to benefit the capital campaign will be held on the Robinson House side porch, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, May 25. Anyone with donations of items in good condition (no clothing, please) should leave them on the porch or call 824-2908 for pickup. Volunteers are needed to help price items on Friday, May 24, and assist with the sale on Saturday. Please call the society office to offer volunteer assistance.

From the Bethel Library

The Bethel Library is once again gearing up for the annual perennial plant sale. All proceeds from the sale help to purchase new adult and children's books, books on tape and videos. The sale will be held June 1 from 9 to 10 a.m. at the side lawn of the library. All local gardeners are asked to help provide treasures from their gardens. Please pot the plants at least one week in advance of the sale in order to give the plants time to recuperate. If you need help digging or would like pots and/or labels, please get in touch with our committee chairs, Melody Bonnema at 824-0405, Betsy Raymond at 824-2261 or Shelley Douglass at 824-3203.

The plant committee would like to give a big thank you to Norm Davis for selling plants throughout the year and for donating the proceeds to help offset the startup costs for the sale. Norm, thank you. Please note that Friday hours for the library are now 1 to 5 p.m.

From the Ellis River Riders

The Ellis River Riders held their first show Sunday, May 19, at their show grounds in Andover. There were 55 horses showing in open and gymkhana classes. The Ellis River Riders have many shows scheduled for this season and offer Leadline, Walk-Trot, Senior Novice and Senior classes. Something for everyone.

The public is invited to come and watch the shows. We have seating for spectators; we offer wonderful food at the "Feed Bag" restaurant; a covered picnic area is available with tables, etc. Admission for the public is free, and it is a great outing for the whole family. We also have a pole barn for the show horses and camping sites are available for those who want to spend the night. So, join us at our next shows, June 8 for a Gymkhana show and June 9 for an Open show.

You can visit us at the www.ellisriverriders.com site and learn more about our facilities and get the latest show results. You will also find the trail rides schedule for this season. Come ride with us.

On June 1, the Ellis River Riders will host a St. Jude's Charity trail ride, starting at the show grounds in Andover. All proceeds will go to the St. Jude's Charity Fund. If you are interested in riding, contact Kate Slattery at 836-3217 to get your sponsor sheets.

From the Bethel Rotary Club

This week, Rotary was Club Assembly. Janet Black, chair of Club Service Committee, updated us on the upcoming Bring a Friend to Rotary. Kevin Finley, from the Scholarship Committee, reported that Rotary would be able to match two Telstar Presidential Awards this year.

Reporting for the Vocational Service Committee, Dan Hart reminded us of our four candidates heading to RYLA in late June. The committee is still accepting nominations for the Vocation Service Award and the committee will be exploring a mentoring program.

Chair Dawna Cook, of the International Service Committee, recapped the recent GSE visit and said that Quartermaster Dave Nivus had returned from the Bolivian Rotoplast trip and that Mission Leader Mike Liberti will be returning at the end of the week. We look forward to hearing about their trip.

The Community Service Committee reported that they are leaning toward participating in this year's Art Fair and Harvestfest with a food booth.

Walter Hatch recounted his work to date on the clock project. At this time, all the project information has been submitted to Key Bank's corporate headquarters for consideration. This project will also be an item on the Bethel Selectmen's upcoming agenda.

Guest Jeri Greenwell accepted a contribution from the Bethel Rotary Club on behalf of the American Legion for Boys and Girls State. Jeri shared some background and information on the Boys/Girls State programs. Boys State started in 1935 with Girls State following in 1938. These programs offer the students firsthand knowledge of our legislative process. They learn it by living and doing it from the local level on up to the state level. The process is pretty comprehensive with even campaigning and elections.

Students qualify for Boys/Girls State in their junior year of high school and are nominated by guidance or the principals' offices. Students are selected for their scholastics, leadership and overall well-being.

The annual Rotary Auction will be Saturday, June 22. If you have any items that you would like to donate and have picked up, please contact Rotarian Al Barth.

The seventh annual Bethel Rotary Golf Challenge will be Monday, June 24. This event features an 18-hole four-ball scramble format at The Bethel Inn and Country Club. Registration begins at noon with a 1 pm Shotgun start. FMI, sponsorship opportunities, and tournament entry, please call 824-4500.

Inside Rotary: Thanks Dan Pattee for participating in Camp Sunshine cleanup. Good to see Casey Cramton. Welcome home college kids for the summer. Thank you Bethel Historical Society for the scrumptious breakfast.

Uncles and great-uncles who served in the military are: Chester Wheeler, U.S. Army in Viet Nam; Reginald Brown, retired, Army Reserves; Chester (Ted) Wheeler, U.S. Army officer in WWII; Albert (Abe) Wheeler, U.S. Army officer in WWII; John Andrews, U.S. Air Force in Korean War; and Richard Andrews, U.S. Army in WWII. Rachael will take part in Bethel's Memorial Day observance, which this year will include several new features. "We're trying to recreate interest in the real meaning of Memorial Day," said Don Feeney of the Mundt-Allen American Legion Post. This year, the ceremony at the Bethel Common will include the reading of the names, age, and service branch of all 22 Bethel men killed in the wars of the 20th century. In addition, organizers are trying to get more veterans to take part in the parade and ceremony. For veterans who would find it difficult to march the length of Main Street, jeep rides are offered. There will also be special seating at the common. Any veteran interested in riding in the parade is asked to call Fred Burke at 824-2886 or Richard Farren at 836-2725. They need not be a Legion member to participate. Veterans who wish to march in the parade may gather at the Civil War monument on Main Street for the 11 a.m. parade. (Photo by Michael Daniels)

Obituaries

ANNIE T. CROCKETT

Annie T. Crockett, 93, of Bryant Pond, died Saturday morning, May 18, 2002 at Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway.

She was born in New Gloucester on Nov. 17, 1908, a daughter of Albert D. and Mabel (Garcelon) True. She was educated in New Gloucester schools and graduated fourth in her class in 1926. She attended Nason College and obtained a business teaching certificate from the Auburn Maine School of Commerce. After working at the Androscoggin Airport business office for two years, she moved to Bryant Pond in 1929. There she taught business subjects for 25 years and was the librarian at the Whitman Memorial Library for four years.

She married railroad telegrapher Robert C. Crockett of Bryant Pond in 1934. They traveled extensively by rail throughout the U.S. and Canada.

She and Bob never had children of their own but they loved young people very much. After Bob's death in 1980, Annie began providing significant financial support, inspiring young people to be all they could be. Whether they were children with severe disabilities, illness or very gifted, Annie always wanted to help.

For years, Annie gave substantial financial aid to organizations like the Maine Handicapped Ski Program and her personal scholarship program for the Telstar Regional High School graduates. For 20 years, she administered the Frederick J. Kinsman Trust Scholarship Program and was president of the Crockett Foundation that she and her husband created to help young Maine people achieve their best. Annie's legacy of generosity and good works will continue through the Crockett Foundation.

She was a member of the Universalist Church, the Woodstock and Bethel Senior Citizens, the Oxford County and Maine Retired Teachers Association and the Extension Group. Annie also enjoyed reading, gardening, sewing patchwork quilts and her love of cats.

She is survived by a cousin, Margaret True Racette of New Gloucester; and many nieces, nephews, caregivers and friends. She was predeceased by three sisters, Alma Tripp, Martha Edson and Eleanor Manley.

A graveside service will be held at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, May 23, at the Crockett Plot at Lakeside Cemetery in Bryant Pond. If desired, donations can be made to either of the churches in Bryant Pond.
